

MILLIONAIRES ARE TAKING A KEEN INTEREST IN HORSE-RACING NOW.

Clarence Mackay and Joseph E. Widener Latest Additions to Ranks of Wealthy Horse Owners and Breeders.

The clean, legitimate character of racing about New York has induced rich and influential men to adopt the sport as a pastime. New blood and new millions are constantly being added to the game, and this is what racing needs to feed it. Clarence W. Mackay and Joseph E. Widener are among the latest acquisitions.

In these days of outrages against trusts and millionaires it is a pleasure to say that in racing millionaires are welcome. They stimulate breeding interests by competition in open market for fancy strains, and thus add a bullish tendency to the thoroughbred market.

Racing is essentially a sport, and when men of wealth begin to take an interest in it, then the gambling features will gradually be overshadowed. With such men as James R. Keene, William C. Whitney, August Belmont, Clarence Mackay, Joseph E. Widener, Arthur Featherstone, and others prominent in racing affairs, when comes the sporting phase of racing the thoroughbreds must predominate.

These men care nothing for the betting ring. They care not if the price against their horse is even money or 10 to 1. Their pleasure lies in the pride of owning grand thoroughbreds of their own breeding.

Clarence W. Mackay began in a casual way by purchasing Banastar and one or two other horses last year. His interest increased, and at the late sale of Merton Daly's string he was a generous purchaser, buying among others the three-year-old relative to Hamburg, Frankfort. He will be a strong factor in racing this season and should meet with a fair share of success.

Mr. Widener is also beginning modestly. He has Miss Mitchell and Philmonte, and he is going to race them over the tracks first. Mr. Widener is an enthusiast in hunting affairs and has many active connections.

He also has one of the largest stables of fancy harness horses in the country, and several years ago captured the big trophy of the Horse Show with his stable, Pon Melrose.

Once Mr. Widener gets a taste of the pleasures and joys that grow out of an ownership of a horse, there is no telling what he will do next for the sport, for he will no doubt set sail for the Whitelaw, Keenes, and Belmonts, as has Mr. Mackay.

To keep competition is a good thing for the turf, and the acquisition of Mr. Mackay and Mr. Widener will be welcomed.
